Introduction to the Feversham (Duncombe) Collection - ZEW

The documents of Lord Feversham deposited in the North Yorkshire Record Office, relate to the principal Yorkshire estate owned by the Duncombe Family, that of Helmsley - Kirkby Moorside (the Duncombe Park Estate) in North Yorkshire. The family also owned property in West Yorkshire, notably Badsworth, Adwick and Copgrove, and certain archives pertaining mainly to Badsworth and Adwick, appear in Section IV 17 of the present list. Of the Duncombes' other properties, such as the Manor of Langdale in Nottinghamshire, which passed to Thomas, a younger brother of the first baron, and the Stockerston Estate in Leicestershire, one stray document for the first (IV 17/6) and one stray bundle for the second (IV 17/4) have survived here. The archives of the Bedfordshire-Cambridge-Huntingdonshire border properties of the family, purchased in the nineteenth century by Octavius, youngest son of the first baron, have been deposited at Bedford County Record Office, where they are catalogued as DDFE.

As it can be seen, the Feversham collection at Northallerton forms only a part of the Duncombe family archives and it is to be regretted that although there are many records of the Duncombe Park Estate surviving, much was burnt at Helmsley Gas Works in 1919; it is very likely that all the Helmsley Manorial Rolls perished then. However, one survival of the fire was a 1647 survey and rental of Helmsley, which was rescued by a Mr Peter, sold by him to Captain Foott, who in turn deposited it at this office in 1951. It has now been reunited with the Feversham Collection (IV 1/6)

The nucleus of the Kirkby Moorside - Helmsley records were received at this office in 1956, while those relating to Adwick, Badsworth, Stockerston and Bedale came in 1965. A further deposit of field books valuations, tillage records, among others, came from the Helmsley Estate Office in 1969. The present list takes account of all three deposits.

Concerning the collection itself, the title deeds show that Helmsley was once the property of the Earls of Rutland in the 16th and 17th centuries, and then passed to the Duke of Buckingham, whose trustees sold it in 1695, along with the manor of Kirkby Moorside, to Charles Duncombe, a London banker, to pay off Buckingham's debts. Charles Duncombe's first purchase in North Yorkshire however, was property at Appleton le Street in 1681 (I.1)

For reasons already stated, the manorial aspects of Kirkby Moorside - Helmsley estate lie heavily in favour of Kirkby Moorside; the long series of court rolls begins in the reign of Elizabeth I, when the manor was held of the Queen by one Ralph Bowes, farmer, and continue to 1925, although the last manorial court was actually held in 1912. There are also a large number of original surrenders of copyhold property for Kirkby Moorside, with their symbolic knots of straw still attached. The other manors of Helmsley, Rievaulx, Wombleton, Harome, Pockley, Beadlam are represented only by an incomplete series of jury presentments, verdicts, court books and other court papers.

The estate papers are one of the most important classes in the collection, and are remarkable in containing an extensive series of surveys and field books, mainly of late 18th and early 19th century date. These records appear to cover every part of the Duncombe property in the Helmsley - Kirkby Moorside areas, and provide a detailed history of tenancy, field names, value of property and acreages owned in each township at that time. Moreover, from 1763 onwards, they are backed up by a fine set of estate maps drawn mainly by Tukes and Ayer, who also undertook their own remarkably detailed survey of the townships on the Duncombe Estate between 1820-1831. This survey takes the form of 12 leather bound, manuscript volumes, containing individual plans for every tenants holding, and summaries of the acreages occupied in each township by each tenant (IV 13/1- 12). The amount of work done by Tukes and Ayer for the Duncombes suggest a happy working relationship between employer and surveyor. This was not always the case, for Joseph Foord, who surveyed the glebe lands of Helmsley vicarage in 1780 for Charles Slingsby Duncombe, later became embroiled with him in a legal dispute over payment for similar work he had done on the family estate.

With regard to estate management, the collection contains details of expenditure and income in rentals, agents' accounts, vouchers etc. while tillage records provide examples of 19th century agricultural methods. The "New System of Cropping" of 1845 illustrates the operation of a four year crop rotation being practised at Carlton, Helmsley, Harome, Rievaulx, Sproxtton and Grange (IV 8/10). The information provided by documents of this type and the extensive nature of the other estate papers mentioned above, make the Feversham archive one of the most important estate collections (particularly for the period 1750-1850) in the County Record Office.

A section of letters and papers (ZEW X) includes political, household and public office papers as well as family and personal letters. It includes a list of livery attendants of Thomas Duncombe, High Sheriff of Yorkshire, and personal papers of Charles Slingsby Duncombe (died 1803), Charles Duncombe, first Lord Feversham (died 1841) and William Ernest Duncombe M.P. for the North Riding (1859-1867) afterwards first Earl of Feversham (1868). Also listed here are miscellaneous items including a manuscript flute tutor, a love letter of 1672, and a letter of 1680 from the Quaker William Tomlinson to George Parish.

X LETTERS & PAPERS

These papers have been gathered from several sections of a superseded arrangement of the archive and re-arranged, very roughly, in chronological order. In previous, and now superseded, lists the following descriptions have appeared: these descriptions are repeated here in order to indicate to those who have referred to the old & superseded lists that the documents are now in this category and are available at various places on microfilms numbers 1418, 1427 & 1428. So far as possible microfilm and frame numbers have been placed against the old descriptions, but there are some cases where this method of reference has not proved practicable.

Manor of Snilesworth, 1637

1. Order: the survey appears to start at the northern end of the township and work down the east bank of the Upper Rye, with excursions up side-dales, then back up the west bank
2. Provisional identifications: Scelbie Grange (p.1) - Crag Farm, SE 511967, which lies beneath Skelbeast Crag.
'Iron Plotts' (pp.2-3) presumably adjoin Iron Howe Moor
Prodells (p.1): the Prod dales of OS map, SE 517970, which includes a large bank- and-ditch enclosure of probable medieval-monastic origin. A similar enclosure, north of Scotland Farm SE 531941, may be the 'Great Pasture' held by Thos. Flintoft (p.4) except that this doesn't match the suggested order of farms
3. Evidence of wills. Very few wills for Snilesworth residents, but the following merit attention:
Nynyan Parkinson of Snylesworth par. Hawnby (Borthwick PR v.29 f.131); pr.1603 minimal bequests: witnesses Treneman, Bawderson, 'Anth. Watson my pastor'
John Conyers als Maultbie of Blawgill (v.33, f.224v): pr.1614. Recusant?
Witnesses: Harker, Flintoft
Thos. fflintoft of Arnsgill (v.38, f.475) pr.1625. Supervisors, brother-in- law Rd. Trewman, and Anth. Flintoft
'of Weather' (an Anthony Flintoft at Weathercote, Bilsdale Low West Side, in 1637)
Dorothie Harker of the High Coate in Snilesworth (v.39, f.341) pr.1625.
Considerable cash bequests, inc. to John Barnett, Leonard Norman, Cuthbert Newsum, John Harbutte, Thos. Harbert (?Garbutts?), John Adamson, Rd. Dawson, Wm. Preere (?Freer), Thos. Wood 'my man', Ellen Proud. Executor, John Barnett. Witnesses: Hildreth, Marshall, Xfr. Barnett.

These notes have been compiled by Mr J. McDonnell
